Dried grass clippings are among the most popular mulches for discouraging weeds and reducing the loss of water to evaporation.

Drying the clippings from your lawn keeps them from packing down, fermenting and smelling.

If your lawn contains grasses that spread from runners like wire grass; spread layers of newspapers or cardboard before mulching with dried clippings, to reduce rooting.

If you spray your lawn grass with weedkiller, compost the clippings before using them in your garden.

This is the first year that I've ever harvested green beans before green peas - but this has been an unusual spring.

Twymon Nash and E. W. Carson tell me that their early yield are running from 75 to 80 bushels per acre.

Harvest onions when the tops break over. Proper curing is essential for good storage. Yellow onions store better than white onions.

Now is the time to pick up seed for fall gardening. Chineese cabbage, Michlihli makes an excellent fall crop, Waltham 29, Broccali and there are several varieties of Spinach - Virginia Blight Resistant Savoy, America and Melody.

I planted Melody as a spring crop - it is excellent. It can be used in toss salads or used as a green.

Plant Broccali, Spinach and Chineese Cabbage in early July.

Sweet corn planted now will have more insect problems. You'll need to apply pesticides to control the insects.

Reggie Stanley has an excellent stand of Kohlrabi. It is an excellent vegetable that adds variety to the diet.

The Keep Virginia Green Poster Contest is an annual event sponsored by the Virginia Forestry Association. In February $3200 in prizes was awarded to 739 students, 4 schools, and 10 teachers.

Each year four top winners are selected. Their posters appear on next year's Keep Virginia Green Bookcovers. Through the sale of bookcovers to association members, banks and forest industries, the Virginia Forestry Association is able to generate funds for its other educational programs: $3500 in scholarships were granted to outstanding young people entering forestry careers: $2300 Conservation Resource Kits were sent to school libraries for student-teacher use; A Woodsy Owl Club House was built at the Forestry Environmental Center for educational and group use; and $1000 in teacher scholarships was initiated for summer forestry short courses.

The theme of this year's contest was "Trees for 2000". Nearly 14,000 entries were received from 269 schools in Virginia. Inspite of the intense competition. Appomattox County High School was among the top four prize winners. On behalf of the Virginia Forestry Association, Andrew Dresser, left, is shown presenting the 4th place plaque in the 1977 Keep Virginia Green Poster Contest to Glen Duff and Appomattox County High School.
